RELIGIOUS THINKERS MEET

be external. Authority is found in a combination of both factors. Mr. Hibbert suggests that the true church is the fellowship of all seekers after truth at all times: "It is a church that speaks with no dead voice and acts with no dead hand. Just as we really believe only in that which finds us in the scriptures, whatever we may say we believe, so it is only that message of the church which grips and quickens us that has any vital authority."

In the final discussion it was emphasized that the primary function of religion is to convince man that he is an eternal being belonging to an eternal order. Christianity and Buddhism alike give man cosmic value, the one telling him that he is a son of God, the other that he is a potential Buddha. Is that need being sufficiently stressed in England and America? was the note on which the conference closed.

London, Eng. ALBERT DAWSON.
